

Executive Summary and Recommendations

Dataset: Superstore Sales from 2014 to 2017

Key Findings

Top Sellers: Our technology category is doing well, and it brings in the most money with 36.4 percent of our revenue. Things like copiers and phones are making a profit for our business.

Regional Differences: The West and East regions are doing great. They make up most of our sales. The South region is not doing well, and it only brought in 0.39 million dollars in sales compared to the West's 0.73 million dollars.

Customer Types: Normal customers buy the most from us. They make up half of all our sales. Our biggest group of customers is companies, and they make up around 30 percent of our sales.

Profit Warning: Even though our sales are high, some items are not making as much profit as we thought. Furniture sells well. It often has very low or even negative profit margins.

Actionable Recommendations

1. Focus on High-Profit Technology

Since copiers and phones make the money for Superstore Sales, we should try to sell more of them. We can offer deals like bundling a copier with office supplies to get customers to spend more money per order.

2. Review the South Region Strategy

Sales in the South region are too low for Superstore Sales. We need to figure out why this is happening. We should run a discount campaign or targeted advertisements for customers in the South to increase sales.

3. Grow the Business-to-Business Sales

Normal customers already buy a lot from Superstore Sales. To grow more, we should focus on selling to companies. We can offer discounts or membership perks to businesses to get them to place larger and more frequent orders.
